CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: And I will turn it right back over to you, Mr. Broderick, because the next item on the agenda is the introduction of members of the staff. MR. BRODERICK: Okay. We have quite a few staff members here. Michelle Woods is the host, and she's handling some of the technical things of this. Michael Reid is here from the DEQ staff. Mike Stickney is my boss. Amy Brittain is here from DEQ. She will -- be nice to her. She is the technical person you get if you call that phone number that we've given.

Anna Fernow is here from the radiation section staff. Cristi Andrews, our attorney for radiation is here. Kelly Dixon is my boss's boss, the -- the head of the Land Protection Division. She's here. Kole Kennedy is from initial phases of COVID-19 last spring, our radiation section was involved in carrying out an executive order from the governor to look for outdated and unnecessary provisions in our rules.

В

Now, we had done something like this on our own initiative several years ago when we asked the council and the board to revoke the old rules for lead based paint instrument -- x-ray florescent instruments, Subchapter 19. This was a more thorough scrub of the rules, and so I'm going to describe them briefly here, some of the things we found. And these, and possible others, we expect to recommend a rule making to the board at the next council meeting.

We had a limitation on us for most of our rules, and our regulated activity is under the Agreement State Program and the Atomic Energy Act. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has very strict rules on what we have to have in our rules for the Agreement State Program. So we had large areas where we couldn't really, but we did look at the State only rules.

Trying to not go into too much detail, we found several places in our rules outside of

DEQ, and he's kind of the coordinator of all the councils for Land Protection Division.

Matt Wormus is a member of the DEQ staff, and he's kind of a technical person for Zoom stuff. Michael -- Michael Reid is from the radiation section. Quiana Fields is the secretary to all the various councils and boards. She's not technically a staff member, but Tammie Shipman is the court reporter. Bruce Adams is the administrative person from -- for the radiation section, and Phillip Carey, he's technically from OMES, not DEQ, but he is one of our IT wizards, and he has joined in just to be here, I guess, to help if needed.

That's all the staff. Should I go ahead and -- I don't think there are any members of the public here, are there? I'm not seeing any.

CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Broderick. The next item on the agenda is a briefing on upcoming rule making, and I'll turn the floor back over to you again.

MR. BRODERICK: Yes, I'm Mike
Broderick, the manager of the radiation section.
While everybody else was locked down in the the revoked Subchapter 19 that referred to it, that we had removed before, so we will want to remove those.

In our initial rules on Industrial Radiography Certification, we had a requirement for radiographers with a card from out of state to request approval before working in Oklahoma. This isn't used in other states, and we never implemented it here, so we would ask that that be revoked.

And, finally, we will recommend removing some language about the original effective date in the Agreement State Program that's no longer needed. Those, we're very confident you'll see, in rule making on. We may do some more technical revisions -- more technical revisions.

We had a large number of x-ray permits for a type of machine called a sulfur analyzer and for some other simple and low risk machines. Applying for a permit for one of these machines requires the same -- the same things that a more complex radiation machine and more risky one requires, and we think that's probably excessive.

Some of these activities we allowed to be other things that didn't have immediate safety significance if they were suspended for a while.

We did ask licensees to document the things they suspended.

В

We sent the memo out on March 31st, so I was fairly pleased. I think we had a fairly quick reaction. That memo is still in effect. It can't stay in effect indefinitely, but we don't think it's time to return to normal operations yet.

The other big crisis that immediately confronted us was Industrial Radiography Certification. I've spoken -- we've spoken of that before in the council, but I'll remind everyone, Industrial Radiography is a vital service for quality control in the oil industry, especially in the pipeline and refinery industries.

Industrial Radiography using radioactive materials requiring us to work in two-person teams, and the lead radiographer must be certified. To be certified, the radiographer has to meet certain training and experience requirements and pass a written test. The written test is what was critical here.

The certification is good for five years. Before it can be renewed, the test must be passed again. So the radiographers have to take and pass the test to keep working as lead radiographers, so it's of a great significance to them. There's only a few states that are authorized to give the test. We've had radiographers fly in from as far as Alaska to take the test here in Oklahoma.

The test is given in a large testing room and normally to huge groups of people.

We've had as many as 120 people taking the test at one time. That was obviously not going to be acceptable for social distancing, and we had to adjust to how we did things.

We had a radiography test scheduled for late March and one for late April, where people had already enrolled, and we had to cancel those in the short term. But we had radiographers that wanted to renew their cards, and even needed to do it to continue working. And we had some -- some new applicants that wanted to be radiographers for the first time.

To tie things over, we gave a six-month extension to radiographers holding an Oklahoma card, who had applied for a renewal. So we prepared some requirements to allow for social distancing and safety, and in July we resumed testing. The tests were given in small groups of ten people at a time, and we continued those until we got all those with expiring cards taken care of.

Kristie Valtierra of our staff is the front person for us who interacts with the radiography people. And she was a hero in all this, working with anxious radiographers and trying to take care of their needs and arranging -- setting up the tests. We wanted a long-term -- a longer term solution than that, and we worked with the other certifying states to come up with a way to proceed.

Now, for a long time radiographers had complained about the need to come in and take a large test on a specific date, that wasn't always convenient. For as long as I've been here, and I'm sure before that, they've asked for the ability to walk in during business hours and take a certification test.

Now, we've always had to do these large tests, because the state of Texas develops the tests for all states. And they put a lot of work in evaluating the questions and developing them, and they are continually generating new questions. But they're very concerned about protecting the security of the tests and the questions, and not letting the questions be released.

Excuse me a minute here. I had to turn the page and I've got to find where I was.

So we had been working, even before COVID, the certifying states had been investigating using professional testing centers, that work with remote classes and things and they just give exams. And we had been working with them before COVID to allow walk-in testing as licensees requested.

But this became urgent now, because using these tests -- these centers would allow one radiographer to show up at a time, and be dealt with using distancing protocols that are common to all sorts of businesses. So we made implementing this a major priority.

It's about to go online. We're told that this will go online October 1st. The exact date will be out of our control. It's been set up nationally, but it should be October 1st. And applicants will be able to walk in the testing centers and take the tests. There are numerous testing centers all over Oklahoma.

Now, the rest of the process still stays the same, certification applicants will need to apply to Oklahoma and be approved to take the test before showing up at the test center. Everything else remains the same.

This will make the testing a lot more applicant -- more convenient for the applicants and desired for years -- it's been desired for years by the regulating community. It's just about the only positive thing I know of to come out of COVID.

As far as our reaching work of inspection and licensing and regulation, we did some inspection work remotely using video services, like Zoom that we're using here, or reviewing documents submitted electronically, but we've mostly suspended field inspections during this time.

We will look at what should be done in the other types of facilities, but these are our highest -- highest risk facilities. I expect we will continue doing most of our inspection work at other types of facilities, doing those remotely.

In all of this, we've closely followed what other states in the NRC is doing. And I applaud the NRC. They have recognized that each state is different. Often, they have state requirements about the virus that may differ from state to state, and they may have different levels of risk at a different time for COVID. So they have given us a great deal of latitude in what we do to adapt to the pandemic.

So we're looking for best practices in other states, and we're also watching to ensure that we don't get too far ahead or behind other states that would suggest we might be being too bold or too cowardly.

Now, there's a big help on this that's something I want to brag about. Now, there are two organizations of radiation regulators, the CRCPD and the OAS. The OAS is the Organization of Agreement States, and it focuses on the NRC,

We've done a handful of things where we felt it was urgent and could be done with little risk. Usually a complaint investigation or inspection security features at a new installation where the license writer felt it was necessary.

The biggest hazard for radiation exposure in Oklahoma is an industrial radiographer, as we've been discussing. It uses sources that can be almost immediately lethal and it's often done at remote work sites by teams of just two people, and it also has a very high inspection frequency. We're required by NRC to inspect them frequently because of this.

We felt these inspections were our highest inspection priority, and so just this week we're beginning inspections of field work by industrial radiographers. We'll go out on a job site, and that's usually in the open air. And we don't expect to go to their offices until the COVID situation improves, but in the open air we think most of these we can do safely.

We'll be doing these on an announced basis, unlike most of our inspections. These will be announced in advance.

the Agreement State Program.

Now, we have Keisha Cornelius, and that's been one of our staff that's been on the board of OAS since last year. And just a few weeks ago Libby McCaskill of our staff was elected to also be on the board. That, obviously, lets 'em keep track of what's going on in other states. But we're very proud of it.

We have -- two of the eight board members on OAS are from Oklahoma. And we feel it's a form of national recognition for our expertise and the skills and experience of our staff and our programs. We're very proud of Keisha and Libby.

Finally, I want to mention

September 29th of this year will be the 20th anniversary of Oklahoma becoming an Agreement

State. Which, for me, is frightening, because I remember it clearly, and it doesn't seem that long ago, but we've been an Agreement State for 20 years. We're very proud of our program.

We've been recognized by other states on the QAS board, as I mentioned.

The last two NRC reviews of our program, we received the highest possible rating

in all categories, so we're very proud of how this is working and we think it's to the advantage of the people of Oklahoma and to the regulating community, to have someone here in the state.

And that concludes my report on Activities.

CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: Thank you,

Mr. Broderick. The next item is a report by the

Mr. Broderick. The next item is a report by the Chair. I just have two things that I'd like to say. First of all, I'd like to say that I've been in this position since the beginning of Oklahoma becoming -- becoming an Agreement State, and to congratulate Mike and the DEQ staff who work with radiation, radioactive materials, on the commendable implementation and operation of this program.

I have found it to be a -- just an exceptional organization to work with. And it's really a privilege working with you and your staff, Mike.

MR. BRODERICK: Thank you, George.
CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: The other thing I want to do is commend the DEQ, the Land Protection Division and Radiation Section, Mike and your staff, on how you've managed this tumultuous time during COVID-19 restricted

Page 23

3 activities. Your understanding of what was --4 what was necessary and what could be suspended

5 for a time has really allowed the licensees to 6 manage this difficult time very well.

7 Your department, your staff.

Your department, your staff, has been immediately accessible when necessary, and I just want to commend you for a job well done during a difficult time.

MR. BRODERICK: Thank you, sir. We're trying to do our best in a weird time.

13 CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: Well, thank you.

14 The next item on the agenda is the

The next item on the agenda is the Director's Report.

Ms. Dixon.

MS. DIXON: Good morning, everyone.

18 Can you hear me?

MR. BRODERICK: Yes.

MS. DIXON: Okay. Good. Thank you guys for being here. I also want to piggyback on the commendations to staff. Not only has our radiation staff tela-worked, it's all -- all of the agencies. And we have some key staff in our agency who has had to come into the office, mostly our support services that do the financial billings and our HR folks, and then our state -- and laboratory folks have had to come into the office and rotate schedules and work really hard to stay safe and to establish safety protocols.

And I also want to congratulate our radiation staff for their initiative on remote inspections. I think -- I feel like they came out ahead of the game very eager to figure out a way to continue inspections remotely and safely, and they sort of led the way for our division.

And, Mike, I thank you for that. It was -- it's just a great example for our staff.

So the other thing I'd like to do, at least once a year with you guys, is sort of give you a tour of what's going on in our division and our agency a little bit. So it's going to just hit some highlights from our division.

The Brownfields program, which is a voluntary redevelopment program that helps people who want to resolve liability so that they can redevelop properties, is one of our very active programs. And they have a revolving, low interest loan fund.

And we have a couple of really big success stories in that program. One is an old salvage yard called Interstate Metals that's east of downtown Oklahoma City. That had a lot of hazardous waste and dross materials. They were under hazardous waste orders. It was a family business.

It got to the point where they had inability to pay, so this waste was just sitting there and the property was not redevelopable at all. And so a local developer decided to buy the property, clean it up, applied for one of our Brownfields low interest loans, and that helped with part of the cleanup. And that site is almost done. And when it's finished, it will be available for redevelopment. And I'm not sure what the plan is there, but it's -- I think it's cleaned up to commercial standards.

And the other big news in that RLF program is, you might be familiar with the old Diamond Building in Tulsa, also called the Abundant Life Building. It used to be an Oral Roberts building, I believe.

A developer has purchased that, and it is full of asbestos. And so we were able to partner with the City of Tulsa's Brownfields program, and we each gave out our largest loan ever in this program to abate the asbestos in this building so that it can be redeveloped. We think those are two really good news stories.

Page 26

В

We also have a -- some state funding where we can assist local government to resolve environmental problems. And we've used some of that money. This is, I think, the third year we're doing this to assist school districts in cleaning up old laboratory chemicals.

This seems like it comes around once every 20 years or so, but we've been cleaning up old laboratories in schools. That's a one-time cleanup, and they're instructed on the best practices going forward, how to manage their laboratory waste. But this year we did -- we cleaned up 19 schools, their chemical labs. So that's another really good news story.

The next one I don't know if it's such a good news story, but we have a new Superfund site in the state. It's called Henryetta Iron and Metal. It's an old scrap yard in Henryetta. It was really a big eyesore at the end of Main Street in Henryetta, and the problems there are PCBs and heavy metals.

EPA has done a removal of some lead impacted soil in some yards that are adjacent to the property. And now that it's on the list, it can be addressed, so we're looking forward to that getting cleaned up eventually.

A couple of other Superfund sites that are noteworthy, the Tulsa Fuel and Manufacturing Smelter in Washington County, Collinsville. It's been cleaned up and it's on the list to get deleted or taken off the Superfund list, and it's also been redeveloped. Local honey producers have put beehives on the revegetated land, and so they're -- not growing honey, but they're making honey on this Superfund -- former Superfund site.

And the Tar Creek Superfund site, which is probably the biggest Superfund site we have, and it has nationwide interest because it's taking a lot of money from Superfund. And we continue to work there cleaning up properties. We cleaned up 140 acres this year. And that may not sound like a lot of acres, but when you think of the volume of waste materials, chat piles that was overburdened from the mining, it takes a lot of work and a lot of time to clean up those properties.

The other interesting thing about the Tar Creek site is that we are working with the Quapaw Nation under an interagency agreement. We're funding them to do a lot of the work, so they're using their local expertise, and it's working very, very well.

And one other note on Superfund is there's an old refinery -- a former refinery in Bristow called the Wilcox Refinery, that will -- a partial cleanup is going to start sometime this year, probably next month. So that's good news.

The other good news is our budget for this year is -- in land protection is a little bit up, our projected budget. One of the challenges we have is we're not sure what our revenue is going to look like in this COVID world. So we are watching our budget really closely to see where we have to make adjustments.

And the last thing I wanted to mention is that we continue to work on IT solutions.

We're trying to modernize. We want to have more online services available. Mike talked about industrial radiographer testing. We take their applications, and we've been talking for a couple of years about online applications to make it easier for people to apply.

The problem with IT projects is they cost money. So a lot of times we'll budget for things, and then it turns out we don't -- we were not able to follow through. So we continue, though, to try to modernize throughout, not only our division, but the agency. So we're hopeful that we can get the industrial radiographer application going sometime soon, and I think having the new protocol and testing centers will be good, too.

That's all I have, unless you guys have any questions for me.

CHAIRMAN MacDURMON: Okay. Well, thank you, Ms. Dixon.

The next item on the agenda is new business. Is there any matter heretofore unknown which could not have been reasonably foreseen prior to posting of the agenda?

Okay. Hearing none, we'll go to the next item on the agenda, which is scheduling the
